Preface

WEBSTER'S NEW IDEAL DICTIONARY, SECOND EDITION, is the most recent in a series of Merriam-Webster® concise dictionaries that extends back more than 130 years. Over the years, books in this series have carried varied titles, such as Webster's Condensed Dictionary, Webster's Practical Dictionary, and Webster's Ideal Dictionary, but all have shared in being designed to meet the day-to-day needs of dictionary users in the home or office. The new edition is firmly within the tradition of those previous books in its emphasis on practicality, range of material offered, and ease of use, but it also draws much new information—including new vocabulary—from Webster's Ninth New Collegiate Dictionary, the latest in our Collegiate® line of dictionaries.

The heart of Webster's New Ideal Dictionary, Second Edition, is the A-Z vocabulary. Within this section, one finds the core of the English vocabulary; obsolete, rare, and highly technical words and obsolete meanings of common words have been omitted. The vocabulary is thus a compilation of the words most likely to be looked up by any person searching for a meaning, pronunciation, or end-of-line division point. Every definition in this section is based on examples of actual usage found among the more than 13,500,000 citations in the Merriam-Webster files.

The A-Z vocabulary is followed by several sections that dictionary users have long found helpful: a list of common English given names; a list of foreign words and phrases that often occur in English texts but that have not yet become part of the English vocabulary; a list of nations of the world; a list of places in the United States having 16,500 or more inhabitants in the most recent census, with a summary by states; a similar list of places in Canada, with a summary by provinces and territories; a section devoted to widely used signs and symbols; and several others. All are listed on the Contents page.

The A-Z vocabulary is preceded by a section of Explanatory Notes that should be read carefully by every user of the dictionary. An understanding of the information contained in these notes will add markedly to the satisfaction and pleasure that come from looking into the pages of the dictionary. Following these notes is a page that lists and explains the pronunciation symbols used in this dictionary.

Webster's New Ideal Dictionary, Second Edition, is the product of a company that has been publishing dictionaries for nearly 150 years. It has been edited by an experienced staff of professional lexicographers, who believe that it will serve well those who want an easy-to-read record of today's English words.

Explanatory Notes

Entries

A boldface letter or a combination of such letters set flush with the left-hand margin of each column of type is a main entry. The main entry may consist of letters set solid, of letters joined by a hyphen, or of letters separated by one or more spaces:

hot . . . adj
hot-blooded . . . adj
hot dog . . . n

The material in lightface type that follows each main entry on the same line and on succeeding indented lines presents information about the main entry.

The main entries follow one another in alphabetical order letter by letter: bill of exchange follows billion; Day of Atonement follows daylight saving time. Those containing an Arabic numeral are alphabetized as if the numeral were spelled out: 4-H comes between fourfold and Four Hundred; 3-D comes between three and three-dimensional. Those derived from proper names beginning with abbreviated forms of Mac- are alphabetized as if spelled mac-: McCoy comes after Maccabees and before mace.

A pair of guide words is printed at the top of each page. These indicate that the entries falling alphabetically between the words at the top of the outer column of each page are found on that page.

The guide words are usually the alphabetically first and the alphabetically last entries on the page:

alto • amends

Occasionally the last printed entry is not the alphabetically last entry. On page 34, for example, ³*average* is the last main entry, but averring, an inflected form at aver, is the alphabetically last entry and is therefore the second guide word. The alphabetically last entry is not used, however, if it follows alphabetically the first guide word on the succeeding page. Thus on page 18 anchoring is not a guide word because it follows alphabetically the entry anchorage which is the first guide word on page 19.

Any boldface word—a main entry with definition, a variant, an inflected form, a defined or undefined run-on—may be used as a guide word.

When one main entry has exactly the same written form as another, the two are distinguished by superscript numerals preceding each word:

²egg n ²rash n

Words precede word elements made up of the same letters; solid compounds precede hyphenated compounds; hyphenated compounds precede open compounds; and lowercase entries precede those with an initial capital:

self . . . n
self- comb form

run-down . . . n
run-down . . . adj
run down . . . vb
fed-er-al . . . adj
Federal n

The centered dots within entry words indicate division points at which a hyphen may be put at the end of a line of print or writing. Thus the noun res-er-va-tion may be ended on one line and continued on the next in this manner:

er-va-tion res-
va-tion reser-
tion reserva-

Centered dots are not shown after a single initial letter or before a single terminal letter because typesetters seldom cut off a single letter:

evict . . . vb
mighty . . . adj
oleo . . . n

Nor are they usually shown at the second and succeeding homographs of a word:

²pilot vb
³pilot adj

There are acceptable alternative end-of-line divisions just as there are acceptable variant spellings and pronunciations, but no more than one division is shown for any entry in this dictionary.

A double hyphen at the end of a line in this dictionary (as in the definition at dromedary) stands for a hyphen that is retained when the word is written as a unit on one line. This kind of hyphen is represented in boldface words in this dictionary with an en dash, which appears whether or not it falls at the end of a line.

When a main entry is followed by the word or and another spelling, the two spellings are equal variants. Both are standard, and either one may be used according to personal inclination:

lou-ver or lou-vre

If two variants joined by or are out of alphabetical order, they remain equal variants. The one printed first is, however, slightly more common than the second:

coun-sel-or or coun-sel-lor

When another spelling is joined to the main entry by the word also, the spelling after also is a secondary variant and occurs less frequently than the first:

fo-gy also fo-gey

Secondary variants belong to standard usage and may be used according to personal inclination. If there are two secondary variants, the second is joined to the first by or. Once the word also is used to signal a secondary variant, all following variants are joined by or:

²wool-ly also wool-ie or wooly

Variants whose spelling puts them alphabetically more than a column away from the main entry are entered at their own alphabetical places and usually not at the main entry:

tsar . . . var of CZAR

Variants having a usage label appear only at their own alphabetical places:

la-bour chiefly Brit var of LABOR

To show all the stylings that are found for English compounds would require space that can be better used for other information. So this dictionary limits itself to a single styling for a compound:

book-sell-er
yes-man
home run

When a compound is widely used and one styling predominates, that styling is shown. When a compound is uncommon or when the evidence indicates that two or three stylings are approximately equal in frequency, the styling shown is based on the analogy of parallel compounds.

A main entry may be followed by one or more derivatives or by a homograph with a different functional label. These are run-on entries. Each is introduced by a lightface dash and each has a functional label. They are not defined, however, since their meanings are readily understood from the meaning of the root word:

healthy . . . adj . . . — health-i-ly . . . adv — health-i-ness . . . n
as-sent . . . vb . . . — assent n

A main entry may be followed by one or more phrases containing the entry word or an inflected form of it. These are also run-on entries. Each is introduced by a lightface dash but there is no functional label. They are, however, defined since their meanings are more than the sum of the meanings of their elements:

¹go . . . vb . . . — go to bat for : . . .
¹hand . . . n . . . — at hand : . . .

Defined phrases of this sort are run on at the entry constituting the first major element in the phrase. When there are variants, however, the run-on appears at the entry constituting the first major invariable element in the phrase:

¹seed . . . n . . . — go to seed or run to seed 1: . . .

Boldface words that appear within parentheses (as co-ca at co-caine and jet engine and jet propulsion at jet-pro-pelled) are run-in entries.

Attention is called to the definition of vocabulary entry on page 585. The term dictionary entry includes all vocabulary entries as well as all boldface entries in the section headed "Foreign Words and Phrases."

Pronunciation

The matter between a pair of reversed virgules \ \ following the entry word indicates the pronunciation. The symbols used are explained in the chart printed inside the back cover.

A hyphen is used in the pronunciation to show syllabic division. These hyphens sometimes coincide with the centered dots in the entry word that indicate end-of-line division:

vol-ca-no \vāl-'kā-nō\

Sometimes they do not:

grind-er \'grīn-dər\

A high-set mark ' indicates major (primary) stress or accent; a low-set mark , indicates minor (secondary) stress or accent:

cat-bird \'kat-,bərd\

The stress mark stands at the beginning of the syllable that receives the stress.

A syllable with neither a high-set mark nor a low-set mark is unstressed:

The presence of variant pronunciations indicates that not all educated speakers pronounce words the same way. A second-place variant is not to be regarded as less acceptable than the pronunciation that is given first. It may, in fact, be used by as many educated speakers as the first variant, but the requirements of the printed page are such that one must precede the other:

eco-nom-ic \ek-ə-'nām-ik, ě-kə-\
flac-cid \'flak-səd, 'flas-əd\

Symbols enclosed by parentheses represent elements that are present in the pronunciation of some speakers but are absent from the pronunciation of other speakers, elements that are present in some but absent from other utterances of the same speaker, or elements whose presence or absence is uncertain:

fo-liage \fō-l(ē-)ij\
duke \d(y)ük\

Thus, the above parentheses indicate that some people say \fō-lē-ij\ and others say \fō-lij\; some \dük\, others \dyük\.

When a main entry has less than a full pronunciation, the missing part is to be supplied from a pronunciation in a preceding entry or within the same pair of reversed virgules:

out-er-most \-,mōst\
pa-la-ver \pə-'lav-ər, -'läv-\

The pronunciation of the first two syllables of outermost is found at the main entry outer. The hyphens before and after \läv\ in the pronunciation of palaver indicate that both the first and the last parts of the pronunciation are to be taken from the immediately preceding pronunciation.

In general, no pronunciation is indicated for open compounds consisting of two or more English words that have own-place entry:

motor vehicle n

Only the first entry in a sequence of numbered homographs is given a pronunciation if their pronunciations are the same:

²measure vb

The pronunciation of unpronounced derivatives and compounds run on at a main entry is a combination of the pronunciation at the main entry and the pronunciation of the other element as given at its alphabetical place in the vocabulary:

— nar-row-ness n

— at last

Thus, the pronunciation of narrowness is the sum of the pronunciations given at narrow and -ness; that of at last, the sum of the pronunciations of the two elements that make up the phrase.

Functional Labels

An italic label indicating a part of speech or some other functional classification follows the pronunciation or, if no pronunciation is given, the main entry. The eight traditional parts of speech are indicated as follows:

fa-ce-tious . . . adj

al-to-geth-er . . . adv

if . . . conj

amen . . . interj

log-ger-head . . . n

in-to . . . prep

we . . . pron

stul-ti-fy . . . vb

Other italicized labels used to indicate functional classifications that are not traditional parts of speech include:

blvd abbr

self- comb form

super- . . . prefix

-ous . . . adj suffix

-al-ly . . . adv suffix

-hood . . . n suffix

-fy . . . vb suffix

Na symbol

ought . . . verbal auxiliary

Functional labels are sometimes combined:

can-ta-bi-le . . . adv or adj

Inflected Forms

Nouns

The plurals of nouns are shown in this dictionary when suffixation brings about a change of final -y to -i-, when the noun ends in a consonant plus -o or in -ey, when the noun ends in -oo, when the noun has an irregular plural or a zero plural or a foreign plural, when the noun is a compound that pluralizes any element but the last, when the noun has variant plurals, and when it is believed that the dictionary user might have reasonable doubts about the spelling of the plural or when the plural is spelled in a way contrary to what is expected:

dairy . . . n, pl dair-ies

po-ta-to . . . n, pl -toes

lack-ey . . . n, pl lackeys

zoo . . . n, pl zoos

tooth . . . n, pl teeth

deer . . . n, pl deer

al-ga . . . n, pl al-gae

broth-er-in-law . . . n, pl brothers-in-law

²pi . . . n, pl pis

Cutback inflected forms are used when the noun has three or more syllables:

atro-ci-ty . . . n, pl -ties

The plurals of nouns are usually not shown when the base word is unchanged by suffixation, when the noun is a compound whose second element is readily recognizable as a regular free form entered at its own place, or when the noun is unlikely to occur in the plural:

car-rot . . . n

horse-fly . . . n

po-ly-g-a-my . . . n

Nouns that are plural in form and that regularly occur in plural construction are labeled n pl:

bifocals . . . n pl

Nouns that are plural in form but that are not always construed as plurals are appropriately labeled:

taps . . . n sing or pl

Verbs

The principal parts of verbs are shown in this dictionary when suffixation brings about a doubling of a final consonant or an elision of a final -e or a change of final -y to -i-, when final -c changes to -ck- in suffixation, when the verb ends in -ey, when the inflection is irregular, when there are variant inflected forms, and when it is believed that the dictionary user might have reasonable doubts about the spelling of an inflected form or when the inflected form is spelled in a way contrary to what is expected:

beg . . . vb begged; beg-ging

equate . . . vb equat-ed; equat-ing

²panic vb pan-icked . . . ; pan-ick-ing

obey . . . vb obeyed; obey-ing

¹travel . . . vb -eled or -elled; -el-ing or -el-ling

²visa vb vi-saed . . . ; vi-sa-ing

²chagrin vb cha-grined . . . ; cha-grin-ing

The principal parts of a regularly inflected verb are shown when it is desirable to indicate the pronunciation of one of the inflected forms:

²spell vb spelled \ˈspeld\; spell-ing

²season vb sea-soned; sea-son-ing \ˈsēz-(ə-)niŋ\

Cutback inflected forms are usually used when the verb has

10a Explanatory Notes

three or more syllables, when it is a two-syllable word that ends in -l and has variant spellings, and when it is a compound whose second element is readily recognized as an irregular verb:

multi-ply . . . vb -plied; -plying cav-il . . . vb -iled or -illed; -iling or -ililing

for-go or fore-go . . . vb -went . . .; -gone . . .; -go-ing

The principal parts of verbs are usually not shown when the base word is unchanged by suffixation or when the verb is a compound whose second element is readily recognizable as a regular free form entered at its own place:

²shield vb

Adjectives & Adverbs

The comparative and superlative forms of adjectives and adverbs are shown in this dictionary when suffixation brings about a doubling of a final consonant or an elision of a final -e or a change of final -y to -i-, when the word ends in -ey, when the inflection is irregular, and when there are variant inflected forms:

¹sure . . . adj sur-er; sur-est

hors-ey or horsy . . . adj hors-ier; -est

bad . . . adj worse . . .; worst

sly . . . adj sli-er also sly-er . . .; sli-est also sly-est

The superlative forms of adjectives and adverbs of two or more syllables are usually cut back:

scanty . . . adj scant-i-er; -est

¹ear-ly . . . adv ear-li-er; -est

The comparative and superlative forms of regularly inflected adjectives and adverbs are shown when it is desirable to indicate the pronunciation of the inflected forms:

strong \ˈstrɒŋ\ adj stron-ger \ˈstrɒŋ-gər\; stron-gest \ˈstrɒŋ-gəst\

The inclusion of inflected forms in -er and -est at adjective and adverb entries means nothing more about the use of more and most with these adjectives and adverbs than that their comparative and superlative degrees may be expressed in either way: kindlier or more kindly; kindest or most kindly.

At a few adjective entries only the superlative form is shown:

²mere adj mer-est

The absence of the comparative form indicates that there is no evidence of its use.

The comparative and superlative forms of adjectives and adverbs are usually not shown when the base word is unchanged by suffixation or when the word is a compound whose second element is readily recognizable as a regular free form entered at its own place:

²quiet adj

un-hap-py . . . adj

Inflected forms are not shown at undefined run-ons.

Capitalization

Most entries in this dictionary begin with a lowercase letter. A few of these have an italicized label often cap, which indicates that the word is as likely to be capitalized as not and that it is as acceptable with an uppercase initial as it is with one in lowercase. Some entries begin with an uppercase letter, which indicates that the word is usually capitalized. The absence of an initial capital or of an often cap label indicates that the word is not ordinarily capitalized:

spice . . . n

ba-bel . . . n, often cap

Quak-er . . . n

The capitalization of entries that are open or hyphenated compounds is similarly indicated by the form of the entry or by an italicized label:

living room n

in-dia ink . . . n, often cap 1st I

all-Amer-i-can . . . adj

German shepherd n

lazy Su-san . . . n

Jack Frost n

A word that is capitalized in some senses and lowercase in others shows variations from the form of the main entry by the use of italicized labels at the appropriate senses:

Apoc-ry-pha . . . n 1 not cap

¹Pres-by-te-ri-an . . . adj 1 often not cap

cath-o-lic . . . adj . . . 2 cap

east-ern . . . adj 1 often cap . . . 2 cap

Etymology

This dictionary gives the etymologies for a number of the vocabulary entries. These etymologies are in boldface square brackets preceding the definition. Meanings given in roman type within these brackets are not definitions of the entry, but are meanings of the Middle English, Old English, or non-English words within the brackets.

The etymology gives the language from which words borrowed into English have come. It also gives the form of the word in that language or a representation of the word in our alphabet if the form in that language differs from that in English:

ae-gis . . . [L, fr. Gk aigis goatskin]

¹sav-age . . . [ME sauvage, fr. MF, fr. ML salvaticus, fr. L silvaticus of the woods, wild . . .]

An etymology beginning with the name of a language (including ME or OE) and not giving the foreign (or Middle English or Old English) form indicates that this form is the same as the form of the entry word:

ibi-dem . . . [L]

na-dir . . . [ME, fr. MF . . .]

An etymology beginning with the name of a language (including ME or OE) and not giving the foreign (or Middle English or Old English) meaning indicates that this meaning is the same as the meaning expressed in the first definition in the entry:

tur-quoise . . . [ME turkeis, turcas, fr. MF turquoyse . . .]

Small superscript figures following words or syllables in an etymology refer to the tone of the word or syllable they follow. They are used only with forms cited for languages in which tonal variations distinguish words of different meaning that would otherwise sound alike.

kow-tow . . . [Chin k'o' t'ou², fr. k'o' to bump + t'ou² head]

Usage

Three types of status labels are used in this dictionary—temporal, regional, and stylistic—to signal that a word or a sense of a word is not part of the standard vocabulary of English.

The temporal label obs for “obsolete” means that there is no evidence of use since 1755:

³post n 1 obs

The label obs is a comment on the word being defined. When a thing, as distinguished from the word used to designate it, is obsolete, appropriate orientation is usually given in the definition:

far-thin-gale . . . n . . . : a support (as of hoops) worn esp. in the 16th century to swell out a skirt

The temporal label archaic means that a word or sense once in common use is found today only sporadically or in special contexts:

com-mon-weal . . . n . . . 1 archaic ¹thou . . . pron, archaic

A word or sense limited in use to a specific region of the U.S. has an appropriate label. The adverb chiefly precedes a label when the word has some currency outside the specified region, and a double label is used to indicate considerable currency in each of two specific regions:

²wash n . . . 5 West
do-gie . . . n, chiefly West
goo-ber . . . n, South & Midland

Words current in all regions of the U.S. have no label.

A word or sense limited in use to one of the other countries of the English-speaking world has an appropriate regional label:

chem-ist . . . n . . . 2 Brit
loch . . . n, Scot
²wireless n . . . 2 chiefly Brit

The label dial for “dialect” indicates that the pattern of use of a word or sense is too complex for summary labeling: it usually includes several regional varieties of American English or of American and British English:

cal-a-boose . . . n . . . dial

The stylistic label slang is used with words or senses that are especially appropriate in contexts of extreme informality:

tick-er . . . n . . . 3 slang

There is no satisfactory objective test for slang, especially with reference to a word out of context. No word, in fact, is invariably slang, and many standard words can be given slang applications.

Definitions are sometimes followed by verbal illustrations that show a typical use of the word in context. These illustrations are enclosed in angle brackets, and the word being illustrated is usually replaced by a lightface swung dash. The swung dash stands for the boldface entry word, and it may be followed by an italicized suffix:

¹let-ter . . . n . . . 4 . . . <the ~ of the law> deep-seated . . . adj . . . 2 . . . <~ convictions>
depth . . . n . . . 2 . . . <the ~s of the woods>
¹fill . . . vb . . . 6 . . . <laughter ~ed the room>

The swung dash is not used when the form of the boldface entry word is changed in suffixation, and it is not used for open compounds:

en-gage . . . vb . . . 3 . . . <engaged his friend's attention> drum up vb 1 . . . <drum up business>

Definitions are sometimes followed by usage notes that give supplementary information about such matters as idiom, syntax, and semantic relationship. A usage note is introduced by a lightface dash:

fro . . . adv . . . — used in the phrase to and fro
²gang vb 1 . . . — usu. used with up
¹jaw . . . n . . . 2 . . . — usu. used in pl.
¹ada-gio . . . adv or adj . . . — used as a direction in music blast off . . . vb . . . — used esp. of rocket-propelled devices

Sometimes a usage note is used in place of a definition. Some function words (as conjunctions and prepositions) have chiefly grammatical meaning and little or no lexical meaning; most interjections express feelings but are otherwise untranslatable into lexical meaning; and some other words (as honorific titles) are more amenable to comment than to definition:

or . . . conj — used as a function word to indicate an alternative ¹in . . . prep 1 — used to indicate physical surroundings hal-le-lu-jah . . . interj . . . — used to express praise, joy, or thanks ex-cel-len-cy . . . n . . . 2 — used as a title of honor

Sense Division

A boldface colon is used in this dictionary to introduce a definition:

found-ry . . . n . . . : a building or works where metal is cast

12a Explanatory Notes

It is also used to separate two or more definitions of a single sense:

²yellow n 1 : a color between green and orange in the spectrum : the color of ripe lemons or sunflowers

Boldface Arabic numerals separate the senses of a word that has more than one sense:

idol . . . n 1 : an image worshiped as a god 2 : a false god 3 : an object of passionate devotion

A particular semantic relationship between senses is sometimes suggested by the use of one of the two italic sense dividers esp or also.

The sense divider esp (for especially) is used to introduce the most common meaning included in the more general preceding definition:

no-to-ri-ous . . . adj : generally known and talked of; esp : widely and unfavorably known

The sense divider also is used to introduce a meaning related to the preceding sense by an easily understood extension of that sense:

¹flour . . . n : finely ground and sifted meal of a grain (as wheat); also : a fine soft powder

The order of senses is historical: the sense known to have been first used in English is entered first. This is not to be taken to mean, however, that each sense of a multisense word developed from the immediately preceding sense. It is altogether possible that sense 1 of a word has given rise to sense 2 and sense 2 to sense 3, but frequently sense 2 and sense 3 may have developed independently of one another from sense 1.

When an italicized label follows a boldface numeral, the label applies only to that specific numbered sense. It does not apply to any other boldface numbered senses:

craft . . . n . . . 3 pl usu craft

¹fa-ther . . . n . . . 2 cap . . . 5 often cap

²pre-view n . . . 2 also pre-vue \-ˈvyü\

pub-lic-an . . . n . . . 2 chiefly Brit

At craft the pl label applies to sense 3 but to none of the other numbered senses. At father the cap label applies only to sense 2 and the often cap label only to sense 5. At preview the variant spelling and pronunciation apply only to sense 2, as does the chiefly Brit label at publican.

Cross-Reference

Four different kinds of cross-references are used in this dictionary: directional, synonymous, cognate, and inflectional. In each instance the cross-reference is readily recognized by the lightface small capitals in which it is printed.

A cross-reference following a lightface dash and beginning with see is a directional cross-reference. It directs the dictionary user to look elsewhere for further information:

A cross-reference following a boldface colon is a synonymous cross-reference. It may stand alone as the only definition for an entry or for a sense of an entry; it may follow an analytical definition; it may be one of two or more synonymous cross-references separated by commas:

maize . . . n : INDIAN CORN

chap-let . . . n . . . 2 : a string of beads : NECKLACE

²dress n . . . 2 : FROCK, GOWN

cheek . . . n . . . 2 : IMPUDENCE, BOLDNESS, AUDACITY

A synonymous cross-reference indicates that a definition at the entry cross-referred to can be substituted as a definition for the entry or the sense in which the cross-reference appears.

A cross-reference following an italic var of ("variant of") is a cognate cross-reference:

Gipsy var of GYPSY

Occasionally a cognate cross-reference has a limiting label preceding var of as an indication that the variant is not standard English:

har-bour chiefly Brit var of HARBOR

A cross-reference following an italic label that identifies an entry as an inflected form (as of a noun or verb) is an inflectional cross-reference:

feet pl of FOOT

worn past part of WEAR

Inflectional cross-references appear only when the inflected form falls at least a column away from the entry cross-referred to.

Synonyms

A boldface syn near the end of an entry introduces words that are synonymous with the word being defined:

²fear . . . n . . . syn dread, fright, alarm, panic, terror, trepidation

Synonyms are not definitions although they may often be substituted for each other in context.

Combining Forms, Prefixes, & Suffixes

An entry that begins or ends with a hyphen is a word element that forms part of an English compound:

maxi- comb form 1 . . . <maxi-kilt>

ex- . . . prefix . . . <ex-president>

-ship . . . n suffix 1 . . . <friendship>

Combining forms, prefixes, and suffixes are entered in this dictionary for two reasons: to make understandable the meaning of many undefined run-ons and to make recognizable the meaningful elements of words that are not entered in the dictionary.

Lists of Undefined Words

Lists of undefined words occur after the entries anti-, in-, non-, over-, re-, self-, semi-, sub-, super-, and un-. These words are undefined because they are self-explanatory: their meanings are simply the sum of a meaning of the prefix or combining form and a meaning of the second element.

Abbreviations & Symbols

Abbreviations and symbols for chemical elements are included as main entries in the vocabulary:

govt abbr government

Fe symbol . . . iron

Abbreviations have been normalized to one form. In practice, however, there is considerable variation in the use of periods and in capitalization (as vhf, v.h.f., VHF, and V.H.F.), and stylings other than those given in this dictionary are often acceptable.

Symbols that are not capable of being alphabetized are included in a separate section of the back matter headed "Signs and Symbols."

elec-tion-eer \i-,lek-shə-'niər\ vb : to work for the election of a candidate or party elec-tive \i-'lek-tiv\ adj 1 : chosen or filled by election 2 : permitting a choice : OPTIONAL elective n : an elective course or subject of study elec-tor \i-'lek-tər\ n 1 : one qualified to vote in an election 2 : one elected to an electoral college — elec-tor-al \i-'lek-t(ə)-rəl\ adj electoral college n : a body of electors who elect the president and vice president of the U.S.
elec-tor-ate \i-'lek-t(ə)-rət\ n : a body of persons entitled to vote elec-tric \i-'lek-trik\ or elec-tri-cal \-tri-kəl\ adj [NL electricus produced from amber by friction, electric, fr. ML, of amber, fr. L electrum amber, fr. Gk ēlektron] 1 : of, relating to, operated by, or produced by electricity 2 : ELECTRIFYING, THRILLING — elec-tri-cal-ly \-k(ə-)lē\ adv
electrical storm n : THUNDERSTORM
electric chair n : a chair used in legal electrocution
electric eye n : PHOTOELECTRIC CELL elec-tri-cian \i-,lek-'trish-ən\ n : one who installs, operates, or repairs electrical equipment elec-tric-ity \i-,lek-'tris-(ə-)tē\ n, pl -ties 1 : a form of energy that occurs in nature and is observable in natural phenomena (as lightning) and that can be produced by friction, chemical reaction, or mechanical effort 2 : electric current elec-tri-fy \i-'lek-trə-,fī\ vb flied; -fy-ing 1 : to charge with electricity 2 : to equip for use of electric power 3 : THRILL — elec-tri-fi-ca-tion \-,lek-trə-fə-'kā-shən\ n elec-tro-car-dio-gram \i-,lek-trō-'kär-dē-ə-,gram\ n : the tracing made by an electrocardiograph elec-tro-car-dio-graph \-,graf\ n : an instrument for recording the changes of electrical potential occurring during the heartbeat — elec-tro-car-dio-graph-ic \-,kär-dē-ə-'graf-ik\ adj — elec-tro-car-di-og-ra-phy \-ē-'äg-rə-fē\ n

elec-tro-chem-is-try \-'kem-ə-strē\ n : a branch of chemistry that deals with the relation of electricity to chemical changes — elec-tro-chem-i-cal \-'kem-i-kəl\ adj elec-tro-cute \i-'lek-trə-,kyüt\ vb -cut-ed; -cut-ing : to kill by an electric shock; esp : to kill (a criminal) in this way — elec-tro-cu-tion \-,lek-trə-'kyü-shən\ n elec-trode \i-'lek-,trōd\ n : a conductor used to establish electrical contact with a nonmetallic part of a circuit elec-tro-en-ceph-a-lo-gram \i-,lek-trō-in-'sef-ə-lə-,gram\ n : the tracing of the electrical activity of the brain that is made by an electroencephalograph elec-tro-en-ceph-a-lo-graph \-,graf\ n : an apparatus for detecting and recording the electrical activity of the brain — elec-tro-en-ceph-a-lo-graph-ic \-,sef-ə-lə-'graf-ik\ adj — elec-tro-en-ceph-a-log-ra-phy \-'läg-rə-fē\ n elec-trol-o-gist \i-,lek-'träl-ə-jəst\ n : one that uses electrical means to remove hair, warts, moles, and birthmarks from the body elec-tro-ly-sis \i-,lek-'träl-ə-səs\ n 1 : the production of chemical changes by passage of an electric current through an electrolyte 2 : the destruction of hair roots with an electric current — elec-tro-lyt-ic \-trə-'lit-ik\ adj
elec-tro-lyte \i-'lek-trə-,lit\ n : a nonmetallic electric conductor in which current is carried by the movement of ions; also : a substance whose solution or molten form is such a conductor elec-tro-mag-net \i-,lek-trō-'mag-nət\ n : a core of magnetic material surrounded by a coil of wire through which an electric current is passed to magnetize the core elec-tro-mag-net-ic \-mag-'net-ik\ adj : of, relating to, or produced by electromagnetism electromagnetic radiation n : a series of electromagnetic waves electromagnetic wave n : a wave (as a radio wave, an X ray, or a wave of visible light) that consists of associated electric and magnetic effects and that travels at the speed of light elec-tro-mag-net-ism \i-,lek-trō-'mag-nə-,tiz-əm\ n 1 : magnetism developed by a current of electricity 2 : physics dealing with the relations between electricity and magnetism elec-tro-mo-tive force \i-,lek-trə-,mōt-iv-\ n : the work per unit charge required to carry a positive charge around a closed path in an electric field elec-tron \i-'lek-,trän\ n : a negatively charged elementary particle that forms the part of an atom outside the nucleus elec-tron-ic \i-,lek-'trän-ik\ adj : of or relating to electrons or electronics — elec-tron-i-cal-ly \i-'k(ə-)lē\ adv
electronic mail n : messages sent and received electronically elec-tron-ics \i-,lek-'trän-iks\ n 1 : the physics of electrons and their utilization 2 : electronic devices or equipment electron microscope n : an instrument in which a focused beam of electrons is used to produce an enlarged image of a minute object on a fluorescent screen or photographic plate electron tube n : a device in which electrical conduction by electrons takes place within a container and which is used for the controlled flow of electrons elec-tro-pho-re-sis \i-,lek-trə-fə-'rē-səs\ n : the movement

\ə'abut \ə'kitten \ə'r'further \ə'shə \ə'sace \ə'cot, cart of suspended particles through a fluid by an electromotive force — elec-tro-pho-ret-ic \-'rèt-ik\ adj

elec-tro-plate \i-'lek-trə-,plāt\ vb : to coat (as with metal) by electrolysis elec-tro-pos-i-tive \i-,lek-trō-'pāz-ət-iv\ adj : having a tendency to give up electrons elec-tro-shock therapy \-trō-,shāk- \ n : the treatment of mental disorder by the induction of coma with an electric current elec-tro-stat-ics \i-,lek-trō-'stat-iks\ n : physics dealing with the interactions of stationary electric charges

el-ee-mos-y-nary \el-i-'mäs-'n-,er-ē\ adj : CHARITABLE el-e-gance \el-i-gəns\ n 1 : refined gracefulness; also : tasteful richness (as of design) 2 : something marked by elegance — el-e-gant \-gənt\ adj — el-e-gant-ly adv

el-e-gy \el-ə-jē\ n, pl -gies : a poem expressing grief for one who is dead; also : a reflective poem usu. melancholy in tone — el-e-gi-ac \el-ə-'jī-ək-, -ak\ adj

elem abbr elementary

el-e-ment \el-ə-mənt\ n 1 pl : weather conditions; esp : severe weather (boards exposed to the ~s) 2 : natural environment (in her ~) 3 : a constituent part 4 pl : the simplest principles (as of an art or science) : RUDIMENTS 5 : a basic member of a mathematical set 6 : a substance not separable by ordinary chemical means into substances different from itself syn component, ingredient, factor, constituent — el-e-men-tal \el-ə-'ment-əl\ adj
